

Department of
Mental Health & Substance Abuse Services

A note from Commissioner Williams

Fall is here, but one thing that isn't falling is the level of stress that a lot of us are feeling. Whether you're stressed about educating a child, caring for a parent, feeling the effects of now 6+ months of pandemic precautions, or simply worried about what's next, you are not alone!

How can you deal with what you're feeling and get through it? First you have to validate what you're feeling. Stress can affect us in a lot of different ways -- for some it's behavior changes -- maybe your temper flares in unexpected ways or your use of alcohol might have increased -- for others it's isolation, trouble sleeping, or physical symptoms like fatigue or headaches. Take a moment and take stock of the last week: how many days were good days? How many were not good days? If you look at the cause of the not good days, you might find stress at the root of it.

Now that you've validated what you're feeling, talk about it with someone you trust. That can be a spouse, a loved one, a coworker, a neighbor, or a friend. This needs to be someone who knows you at your best and can help you chart a course to get back there. Being open and honest about how you're feeling is a true sign of strength.

If talking it through doesn't produce the change you need, there is help available. The state of Tennessee and many other employers offer Employee Assistance Plans for free or very low cost counseling and therapy (Link for state employees). If you're a front-line healthcare worker or first responder (that includes everyone who works in behavioral health!), there is an emotional support line just for you. Call 888-642-7886 or visit this link to learn more.

In addition to a daily meditation and my faith, I find solace in the opportunity that the current moment presents. It's both a momentous challenge and an unparalleled opportunity to positively impact the lives of the people we are called to serve. I take inspiration from the talent, dedication, and devotion with which you all serve the people of Tennessee. May God continue to bless our work and our state.

TDMHSAS expands Behavioral Health Safety Net to children

TDMHSAS and its community mental health provider partners are excited to expand the state's Behavioral Health Safety Net to uninsured children.

The program offers an array of essential mental health services for uninsured Tennessee children age three to 17. Services are available for family incomes at or below 138 percent Federal Poverty Level. Governor Bill Lee and the Tennessee General Assembly appropriated $7.6 million in new state funding in the current fiscal year to create the Children's Behavioral Health Safety Net (BHSN).

"The Behavioral Health Safety Net is a foundational program to meet the mental health needs of uninsured Tennesseans, and we are so grateful to Governor Lee and the General Assembly for investing and expanding this program to our children. Uninsured children in any county will have the ability to get services through our community mental health providers, and that is amazing," said TDMHSAS Commissioner Marie Williams, LCSW.

Services available through the Children's BHSN include assessment and evaluation, individual therapy, group therapy, family therapy, case management, transportation, family support services, medication management, and pharmacy assistance and coordination. A total of 14 community mental health centers with 136 locations statewide are participating in the program.

The creation of the Children's BHSN complements the state's investment in the TDMHSAS School-Based Behavioral Health Liaison program. Gov. Lee and the General Assembly appropriated more than $3 million in new state funding to expand the program to cover all 95 Tennessee Counties.

TDMHSAS Takes School-Based Mental Health Service Statewide

TDMHSAS is expanding its School-Based Behavioral Health Liaison program to all 95 counties in the state. Governor Bill Lee budgeted and the Tennessee General Assembly appropriated an increase of $3 million for the current fiscal year to expand the program.

School Based Behavioral Health Liaisons provide face-to-face consultation with classroom teachers who enhance learning environments for children who have or are at-risk for Serious Emotional Disturbance (SED), behavior problems, or substance use disorders. Liaisons also provide training and education for classroom teachers and serve as a link between schools and families.

Liaisons currently serve elementary, middle, and high schools in 36 Tennessee counties. In state fiscal year 2020 which ended June 30, liaisons served about 7,500 children and youth and 2,500 teachers. Liaisons held more than 11,000 individual counseling sessions and 7,300 individual consultations.

“With the COVID-19 pandemic affecting so many facets of life, there has never been a time of greater focus on the mental health of our children, youth, and young adults. It is both fortunate and fortuitous that Governor Lee and the General Assembly budgeted the funding to expand this much-needed service,” said TDMHSAS Commissioner Marie Williams, LCSW.

Darren Layman named Director of Project Rural Recovery

Please join us in welcoming Darren Layman to the Department as the Project Director for the Project Rural Recovery SAMHSA grant.

Darren holds a master's degree in Organizational Management and has more than 20 years of experience managing programs and leading staff in a regulatory state agency and health system. In Darren's most recent position, he was responsible for managing the operational, financial, and personnel components and functions of 21 primary care clinics within The University of Washington (UW) Medicine System, UW Neighborhood Clinics and Urgent Care, UW Medical Center-Northwest Primary Care clinics, and UW Medicine Rural Health Clinics.

Darren will be overseeing and monitoring the Project Rural Recovery SAMHSA grant the department received to implement two integrated mobile health clinics in 10 rural Tennessee counties with the help of community partners Helen Ross McNabb and Buffalo Valley, Inc. We look forward to Darren being a part of the team and leading a grant that merges physical and behavioral healthcare for the most vulnerable Tennesseans.

Lygia Williams retires

Please help us thank Lygia Williams, a legend in suicide prevention whose career spans fifty years in public and private sectors.

The importance of suicide prevention has always been in the forefront of her passion whether she was teaching, providing direct service, working as the Director of Serious and Persistent Mental Illness in a community mental health center or as a Vice President of a national mental health company, and during her tenure as a public servant working for the State of Tennessee. As a member of the Office of Crisis Services & Suicide Prevention, Lygia spearheaded the development of the Be the One suicide prevention campaign and Shield of Care, a groundbreaking curriculum developed for juvenile justice staff that is now used all over the country. She also led the Suicide Prevention Resource Center's Zero Suicides in Health and Behavioral Healthcare initiative.

As a suicide attempt survivor, Lygia has advocated for people to share their "lived experiences" throughout her career. She holds a graduate degree in clinical psychology and worked in both child and adult services. We are so grateful for the work she completed and the ongoing efforts that will continue to carry her torch. Thank you, Lygia!

Tennessee Statewide Crisis Services Conference

A VIRTUAL EVENT

August 27, 2020

Making a Difference: Celebrating the Heroes of Today

Sponsored by:

In partnership with:

The Statewide Crisis Services Conference was held virtually Aug. 27. Speakers and session leaders included: TDMHSAS Director of Crisis Services & Suicide Prevention Jennifer Armstrong; Miles Adcox; Dr. Kelly Posner; Babs Tierno, MA; Joanne Perley, MPH; Sean Jones, MSSW; Dr. Stacy Dixon; James Wright; Denise Ryan; and Becky Stoll.

West Tennessee Crisis Providers and law enforcement partners discussed successes, barriers, and lessons learned. Heather Land, TN-based comedienne, author, and singer, provided lunchtime entertainment. TDMHSAS leadership led a tribute to Tennessee's crisis services heroes, with additional entertainment provided by Reagan Strange and Travis Atkinson.

Some responses from some of the 240 participants:

"I love the Virtual Conference experience. Although I do greatly miss being able to be with my peers in person to discuss what topics are being presented."

"Wonderful experience. One of the best virtual conferences/setups I have participated in."

"I am renewed to go back to work tomorrow not only with clients but with coworkers and with family in my personal life also."

"It was so enjoyable as a crisis worker; I would love if you continued with a virtual option in upcoming years so more can participate."

Tennessee Recovery Navigators mark two-year milestone

Just in time for Recovery Month, the program that connects people with addiction treatment, peer support celebrates helping nearly 3,800 Tennesseans

The Tennessee Recovery Navigators are celebrating two successful years of connecting people who come into emergency rooms with treatment for substance use disorder. Navigators are people with lived experience of addiction and at least two years in recovery who are able to use their history to relate to the patients they meet.

“Our Tennessee Recovery Navigators are true way-makers and chain-breakers,” said TDMHSAS Commissioner Marie Williams, LCSW. “They are taking their lived experience of addiction and their new life in recovery and saying to thousands of people, ‘Take my hand. I will show you the way.’”

Congratulations to the Navigators! Keep up the GREAT work!

Highlights: International Overdose Awareness Day 2020

Governor Lee proclaims August 31 as Overdose Awareness Day

Thank you, Gov. Lee!

"International Overdose Awareness Day is an opportunity for all Tennesseans to stand beside those who have lost loved ones to an overdose and those who have a substance use disorder and are diligently working toward recovery."

From the proclamation:

"WHEREAS the number of lives lost to overdose would be greater if not for programs established by the state, supported by federal government agencies and carried out by partners in communities across the state by increasing public awareness, addressing stigma and reducing harm; and WHEREAS, community-based programs from the Tennessee Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services including Regional Overdose Prevention Specialists have distributed at least 160,000 units of the overdose reversal medication naloxone, resulting in 16,000 documented lives saved since October 2017, Tennessee Recovery Navigators have seen more than 3,700 patients in emergency departments, some after experiencing overdose, since June 2018, and Faith Based Initiatives have 635 current Certified Recovery Congregations;

RMHI Spotlight

Submitted by Janice Daniels, RN, Psychiatric Hospital Nursing Unit Manager Middle Tennessee Mental Health Institute

Recently, 10 members of the Unit I Team were “caught in the act” of providing excellent care. A patient and her family felt so strongly about the care, they wrote multiple letters to the Administration. Below are some excerpts:

“I am writing this letter to inform you of your staff’s great superiority. They show it in their hard work and most certainly in everything they accomplish on a daily basis.”

“The fact is that only through their deep compassion and true sense of altruism that I came out of my profound state of despair.”

“In fact, truthfully, they made me feel like I was a family member or at the very least a good friend they were caring for and not a patient.”

“I just have to say that your staff makes and almost impossible job possible through their tireless dedication.”

“...went above and beyond what I could ever have anticipated in keeping in contact with me and my son.”

“I have never had such a good experience with anyone who worked in a hospital setting and feel so strongly about the positive interactions we had...”

The following staff were recognized in these letters:

Social Workers Nikesha Rivera and Brandon McKnight

Psychiatric Technicians Cassidy Roberts, Roger Victory, Marsheta Wallace, and Stephanie Givens

RN Kate Dahl

EVS Technician Keva Richardson

PHNUM Jan Daniels

Physicians Faisal Siddiqui and Hamilton Small.

Please help me thank and congratulate these Unit I Team members for their commitment to excellent care, their support of one another during this very challenging time, and for their positive representation of MTMHI and TDMHSAS!

Metro Drug Coalition educates vape retailers

Submitted by Deborah Crouse, MDC

The mission of Metro Drug Coalition (MDC) is to improve the health of greater Knoxville area. One way we are trying to do that is to increase compliance and awareness of legal nicotine sales. Both federal and state laws have recently changed to reflect a new legal tobacco/nicotine purchase age of 21 years. We know that changes in laws can create confusion and also lead to a breakdown in processes.

In August, MDC created a free workshop for vape shop owners in Knox County in an effort to promote the new law but also help small business owners properly market to the 21+ demographic. The goal was to help stores and their employees increase the rate of compliance in Knox County. MDC educated the vape retailer community on all legal changes. Kim Pouncey with TopShelfEd trained attendees on proper methods of ID checking. Kim is a well-known leader in safe alcohol service and was excited to lend her expertise to the world of vaping and electronic nicotine device sales.

We acknowledge responsible and appropriate marketing is also a very important piece of compliance. We contracted Halee Sprinkle with Czech Yourself Marketing as the keynote presenter. Sprinkle specializes in small business marketing. She provided valuable insight to shop owners to help grow and develop business that focuses on marketing to those individuals of legal purchase age, not minors.

This training was held virtually due to the current pandemic. We are looking forward to making this training available as a virtual toolkit through the MDC website and social media. For more information about this training, please contact Katie Linley at klinley@metrodrug.org.
